

People, Planet & Profit

Google is a company which is always looking for a way to improve people's lives by building and enabling disruptive technology that reinvents the way society addresses shared challenges.

My favorite project from Google is the Project Loon, they argue that everytime we say “everybody is online” is not really everybody, there are tons of people who can’t have access to the internet. Project Loon is trying to build a solution for this problem, looking for a way to put routers on air balloons and give internet to the entire world ( <https://www.google.com/loon/> ) .

I love how Google is always looking for a way to make this world a better place, they are a company which earns a lot of money and instead of keeping all to themselves, they are investing in investigation and research to find new things to help other people.

The Google Developer Groups are another project from Google, they are looking forward to impulse the education to everybody, everywhere. For the GDG’s there are volunteers who are very experienced in a subject or topic and they teach more people in meetups that could be monthly, weekly or separated by any amount of time. What Google does for these groups is sponsoring a good and nice place to make the meetups, food for the attendance and capacitation for the volunteers.

I think the education is the most valuable thing someone could have, in TakeMyBook we are aware that there are many people who does not have the opportunity to get education.

At the beginning that we will not have enough funds to make big donations, we will donate some books to communities where they need them. In the moment we start earning a good amount of money, we would like to make schools in communities where they need education but they doesn't have access to it.
